
Ban Primate Experiments

The life of a primate captured in the jungle and forced to live in a laboratory is one of sickness, despair, fear, loneliness, and terror. Primates are stolen from their homes and forced into gruesome, painful, pointless experiments from which few emerge alive. Because of the scientific inaccuracy of animal experiments and because primates are highly intelligent, sensitive, complex, social beings with physiological and psychological needs as compelling as our own, I join the undersigned in calling on the U.S. Department of Agriculture to ban the use of primates in experimentation.

Name	E-Mail Address

peta2.com BY SUPPLYING MY E-MAIL ADDRESS, I RECOGNIZE THAT I MAY RECEIVE A FOLLOW-UP MESSAGE.