

wet seal TORTURES BUNNIES

Hundreds of millions of rabbits are slaughtered for their fur and flesh every year. Like other animals who are “farmed” for their fur, rabbits are kept in tiny, filthy cages, where they are surrounded by their own waste. They spend their entire miserable lives standing on the thin wires of their cage floor and are never given a chance to dig, jump, or play. The methods of slaughter are inhumane—fur farmers snap rabbits’ necks or smash their skulls before stringing them up by their legs and cutting off their heads.

Wet Seal still sells rabbit fur, but you can help convince it to stop.
